INTRODUCTION

Coccinellidae are Coleoptera well known for their prettiness and utility. They belong to the superfamily Cucuoidea and are a large family with about 6,000 species described worldwide (Iablokoff-Khnzorian 1982; Vandenberg 2002), but many others, especially in subfamilies Sticholotidinae and Scymninae of the tropical regions, are still to be discovered. One hundred and thirty species occur in Italy including Sardinia, Sicily and minor islands (Audisio et al. 1995; Canepari 2003, 2004, 2009). The goal of this paper is to provide an updated commented checklist of the Sardinian species.

MATERIAL AND METHODS

This study is based on material collected by the Centro Nazionale per lo Studio e la Conservazione Biodiversità Forestale "Bosco Fontana" of Verona (Italy) (CNBFVR) (cf. Mason et al. 2006; Cerretti et al. 2009; Bardiani 2011) and on that from various collections examined by the author.

Information about ecology and geographic distribution of species comes from Iablokhoff-Khnzorian (1982), Canepari (2004) and Kovář (2007) and the author's personal observations and/or collection. The systematics used follow Kovář (2007) and Canepari (2004, 2009).

The localities of collection are listed alphabetically according to the new administrative provinces (cf. Bardiani 2011), also when on the original labels the previous arrangement is reported. A semicolon separates different records; if these are from the same site, the name of the site is listed only at the beginning of the oldest record. The genera are listed, unless otherwise stated, according to Kovář (2007), and all species are listed alphabetically.

The geographic coordinates of the sites sampled by CNBFVR are listed by Bardiani (2011).

Unfortunately, the full label data of specimens from some collections (CFF, MCC, MCSV, MCG) are not listed since they were not annotated after the determination of these specimens.

DISTRIBUTION. Spain, Sardinia, Corsica, Caucasus, Middle East and northern central Asia.

NOTES. This subspecies is considered by Iablokoff-Khnzorian (1982) and Kovář (2007) as a synonym of A. bipunctata. In rearings, the nominal form and this subspecies have been obtained together, but in nature A. bipunctata revelierei seems to live only in particular biotopes (I have collected it in Corsica (Monte Cinto) and Spain (Sierra Nevada) only at high altitudes), and is probably an ecological race. The male genitalia are scarcely diagnostic as in many species of Adalia Mulsant, 1846.

DISTRIBUTION. Palaearctic Region.

NOTES. Species apparently rare in Sardinia, that feeds on Leguminosae (Saponaria, Medicago).

DISCUSSION

The Sardinian fauna of Coccinellidae includes with certainty 62 species. As expected, most of the species are widespread in the western Mediterranean Region. Scymnus (S.) damryi is known from Sardinia, Corsica and Elba Island, but no species are endemic of Sardinia. Interesting from a zoogeographical point of view are also some species which occur, other than in Sardinia, in a few other regions only: Nephus (N.) peyerimhoffi in North Africa and the Canary Islands, Hyperaspis algirica in Maghreb and France, and Scym- niscus semirufus in Corsica, the Italian mainland, Dalmatia and Turkey. This last species is rare in other countries while it is commonly found in Sardinia. The records from Sardinia (cf. Audisio et al. 1995; Canepari 2004) of Hyperaspis chevrolati Canepari, 1985, H. concolor Suffrian, 1843, H. reppensis reppensis (Herbst, 1783), Coccinella (Coccinella) magnifica Redtenbacher, 1843, and Scymnus (Mimopullus) pharaonis, Motschulsky, 1851 (= S. araraticus Iablokoff-Khnzorian, 1969) are erroneous, and these species must be excluded from the fauna of this island. However, they occur in the facing Tuscan Archipelago: H. chevrolati on Giglio Island (CCSD: VIII.1957, AS, 1 ex), H. concolor on Elba Island (Canepari et al. 1985), H. reppensis reppensis on Elba Island (Luigioni 1929), Coccinella (C.) magnifica on Elba Island (Luigioni 1929), and Scymnus (Mimopullus) pharaonis on Giglio Island (CFF: IV.1985, AFo, 5 ex).

Scymnus (Mimopullus) fulvicollis (Mulsant, 1846), S. (Neopullus) limbatus limbatus (Stephens, 1831), Hyperaspis hoffmannseggi (Gravenhorst, 1807), Tytthaspis phalerata (A. Costa, 1849) and Calvia decemguttata (Linnaeus, 1758) were quoted from Sardinia by Bertolini (1876). These records were later reported also by Luigioni (1929), who also recorded the following additional species from Sardinia: Scymnus (N.) haemorrhoidalis (Herbst, 1797), Scymniscus tristiculus (Weise, 1929), Chilocorus similis (Rossi, 1790), Exochomus nigromaculatus (Goeze, 1777), Coccidula rufa (Herbst, 1783), Oenopia lyncea agnata (Rosenhauser, 1847), Halyzia sedecimguttata (Linnaeus, 1758) and Myrrha octodecimguttata octodecimguttata (Linnaeus, 1758). All of these thirteen species, during eighty years of subsequent researches, were not found and are very probably absent in Sardinia. Also absent on the island is Nephus (Nephus) reunioni Fürsch, 1974, which was introduced there for biological control of Planococcus citri (Risso, 1813) (Hemiptera, Pseudococcidae) (cf. Ortu & Prota 1983; Luciano et al. 1996; Roy & Migeon 2010) but does not seem to have become acclimatized (Canepari 2004; Kovář 2007).
