Dear colleagues!

We invite you to participate in the 1st Scientific Conference in memory of Prof. Vladimir I. Zhadin (on the 125th anniversary of his birthday), which will be held from 19th to 23rd April 2021 in St. Petersburg, Russia. The host organizations of the Conference are: St. Petersburg Branch of S.I. Vavilov Institute for the History of Science and Technology of RAS and Zoological Institute of RAS.

Professor, Doctor of Biological Sciences, distinguished Soviet scientist Vladimir I. (Ivanovich) Zhadin (1896–1974) made a significant contribution to the establishment and development of aquatic ecology in Russia. His works were devoted to invertebrate zoology (malacology), riverine studies, sanitary hydrobiology, biology of water reservoirs and many other topics. He developed the first theory of the biological productivity of water bodies (1940). Zhadin was a prominent specialist in the field of morphology, systematics and fauna of freshwater mollusks. He was the author of a seminal monograph “Molluscs of fresh and brackish waters of the USSR” (1952), which is still used by many European malacologists and aquatic ecologists. Beginning in 1959 Vladimir Ivanovich was Vice-President of the International Society of Theoretical and Applied Limnology (SIL). In 1965 he was awarded the SIL Einar Naumann Medal for his outstanding research on rivers, water reservoirs, and mollusks.

The scope of the Conference will include communications devoted to results of theoretical and historical research in the fields of freshwater biology and malacology as well as discussions on methodological foundations of these disciplines. The Organizing and Programme committees hope that the Conference will help to enhance the interactions between research practitioners and historians of science in order to contribute to the development of aquatic ecology.

The themes of the Conference will include:

1. History of aquatic ecology and limnology of the 20th century in the context of scientific and ideological discussions
2. Taxonomy, biogeography, faunal studies and ecology of freshwater mollusks
3. Ecological research in rivers and water reservoirs
4. Studies in limnology
5. The current state of aquatic ecology worldwide: trends, problems, and the contribution of historical studies to the understanding of the development of this discipline.

Working languages of the Conference: Russian, English

To participate in the Conference please send the completed registration form and the abstract of your communication (not exceeding 2 pages) to this e-mail address: zhadin2021@yandex.ru. The submission deadline is 30 September 2020. For registration form and the abstract formatting guidelines see appendices at the end of this letter.

Please state the theme of your electronic message as “registration form and abstract_Zhadin2021”). The file with the registration form should be named after the participant’s surname like “Ivanov1.doc” and the abstract should be sent as a separate file named like “Ivanov2.doc”. Each participant is allowed to present no more than 2 abstracts where he/she is listed as the corresponding author. The number of abstracts submitted in co-authorship is not limited.

Participation format — oral or poster presentation.

The Second Announcement will be sent to all registered participants in October or November 2020. It will contain the draft program of the Conference, as well as information about scientific and cultural excursions and the registration fee. Detailed information on the payment of the registration fee will be given later.

We kindly recommend that foreign participants who need a Russian visa start the application procedure as early as possible. The Organizing Committee will provide you with invitation to obtain the visa.

*Please note that the end of April in St. Petersburg is one of the most popular tourist periods. Therefore, we recommend that you book an accommodation as early as possible (e.g. using Booking.com or other specialized web-sites).*
